DEDICATION

The end of any era, especially a successful one, is often an occasion prompting reminiscence and bouquets of praise. Again it is a time to laud the instrumental figures of that period and their achievement. Perhaps the only lamentable factor in such a culminating process is the tardiness with which recognition follows.

Then again, success has followed closely in the footsteps of Loyola College's retiring Director of Athletics, Mr. Ed Meagher. In 1953 when he accepted the post from Bill Orban, after initial athletic administrative work at St. Paul's in Winnipeg, the name Meagher had long become synonymous with a distinctive quality in the field of athletics.

As an undergraduate at both Loyola High School and College, Ed Meagher distinguished himself with a fine athletic career and established a record that included the precedent-setting duty of player-coach of the Varsity hockey team. It was because of his eight year association with this institution that Mr. Meagher learned to evaluate the role of athletics in student life and consequently Loyola prides itself on a close marriage between intellectual endeavour and athletic prowess.

Indeed the most beneficial fruits of this man's genuine concern are mirrored in the attention placed on intramural athletics. Realizing early that extramural sports were of a somewhat esoteric variety, Mr. Meagher perceptively saw the need of an organized system of inter-class sports which would provide a much-needed source of enjoyment and diversity to alleviate the pressures of a heavy academic schedule.

Fortunately Mr. Meagher will not be completely lost to Loyola. He has chosen to remain with the High School as Director of Athletics, a choice that will enable him to continue his invaluable contribution to the school's over-all development. His decision to restrict duties to the one institution has a twofold logic as well. With the College's extensive development, the dual role of Director had become an overly demanding one, and in addition, his move merely complements the position he already assumes as one of the High School's finer mathematics professors.

Of an equally important nature is the fact that presently he handles age groups in their formative years—a fact that has been instrumental in Loyola's widely heralded athletic accomplishments.

Indeed, it is not only in the field of athletics that Mr. Meagher has served Loyola. He came to know his students and to demand the most of them, and because of the reciprocal desire to please, Mr. Ed Meagher has more than succeeded in enhancing the achievement which characterizes Loyola.

VERY REV. PATRICK G. MALONE, S.J.

Rector of Loyola College

OFFICE OF THE RECTOR

April, 1962.

Dear Students:

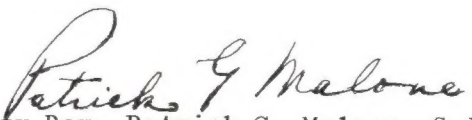

The College has some special reasons to congratulate the class of '62. You have, for example, taken from your immediate predecessors the record (which you must soon give up, I am afraid) of being the largest class thus far. Your gallantry has won you a permanent place in Loyola's history as the first class to include women on the student roster. And then, you are yourselves, and this is the central ground for our pride and congratulations.

Loyola Review '62 is an attractive sample of the good things in your college years. I am sure that it has a wealth of meaning for you, meaning that will undoubtedly shift with the years. For, things have a way of changing back to themselves when looked at without the squint of excitement and involvement. But now they are, as they should be, all smiles and only discreetly indicative of promise to be fulfilled.

Like any yearbook, Loyola Review '62 is a record of people and pastimes. Here are solemn faces and less than solemn activities to suggest that advice is not to be needed or heeded. And yet, the true Loyolan is someone between the grave graduate and the light-hearted letter-man, who takes with him his own advice for meaningful living.

Your college career has been accompanied by man's entry into outer space, separatism in Quebec, the upsurge of African nationalism, the announcement of the Second Vatican Council, all of them invitations to look seriously out to other people's solitudes. I would like to think that Loyola has inspired you to stretch your commitment beyond any narrow comfortable compass. I would particularly like to think that Loyola has given you opportunity to experience that the most challenging frontier in any age is not some outer space but a deeper, inner self. May God bless you in your chosen paths.

Yours sincerely,

Very Rev. Patrick G. Malone, S.J.

Se casco, non casco in ginocchion.

Those that have not known Richard but have seen him around the college probably thought he was a Russian spy. This is not surprising. He was. However, he was also a keen student of English and claims to understand James Joyce. One wonders whether James Joyce would understand him. Certainly the football players didn't, as can be seen from the cries of indignation they raised at his multifarious and well-crafted Amphora contributions. A great future in cryptography.

Le coeur a ses raisons que la raison ne connaît pas — Pascal

After following a French classical course for six years, from which he obtained a Bachelor of Literature degree, Denis decided to enter Freshman Engineering at Loyola. He switched to Arts in Sophomore year and is now majoring in Political Science. Denis, whose main hobbies are golf, swimming and tennis hopes to enter into the Foreign Civil Service after obtaining his Master's Degree in Political Science.

Never compromise a principle.

Mike, a fine product of the N.D.G. District, came to Loyola College through Loyola High. From the day he entered Mike made his name both in intra-mural sports, extra-curricular activities and intense study. With the background of an Arts Man and the organizational ability of a "Madison Avenue" type, Mike should adapt very favourably to his chosen career that of a corporation lawyer. EIGHT YEAR MAN

GENERAL

Man is measured, not by the crosses he bears, but by the strength he gleans from them.

Claude, better known as "Bo," hails from Sherbrooke, Quebec. Since his registration eight years ago — in the high school — Bo has been quite active in campus life. He made many friends at Loyola and if a well-dimpled smile is the key to success, Bo can't miss.

PETER CASEY

HONOURS HISTORY

Peter is a rare individualist who has been known for his keen analysis and solution of problems. He has very definite views on a great variety of subjects, ranging from Prime Ministers to men's hats. Pete can be seen most anytime with pipe and umbrella, rounding up associates for lunch at the Golden Moon. Sometimes in a weak moment one may find him recruiting unwary Freshmen for service in a certain branch of the Armed Forces. His pleasant disposition and reflective sincerity have gained him a host of friends at Loyola. Pete is assured of a successful career, whether it be in law, politics, or Homburgs.

EIGHT YEAR MAN

ZENON BRYNIAWSKY

GENERAL

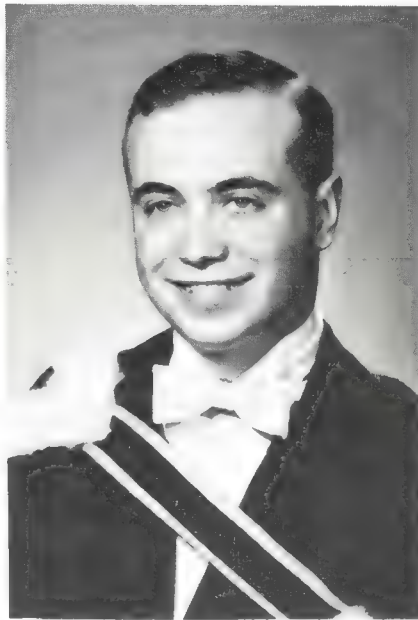

Zenon came to us from Cardinal Newman, arriving at Loyola in his Sophomore year. Ever since that time the Caf has been the rendezvous for daily pre-lecture and post-lecture coffee breaks. His ability to enter a discussion on a wide variety of subjects, his friendly and jovial spirit, as well as his ability on the soccer field have made his stay at Loyola a very lucrative one. "Zenny" plans to attend post-graduate studies in Psychology, which should pose a minor challenge for his enterprising spirit.

BASIL ROBERT CUDDIHYGENERALAd Astra Per Aspera*

Formally known as Robert, he is affectionately called "Baz" by his confreres. During his eight years at Loyola, notre grand ami has ambled about, around and through the campus winning a host of friends, and charming, however guilelessly, a score of professors. Next year? Perhaps the teaching profession. If the past is a good indication, Baz should succeed most admirably.

EIGHT YEAR MAN

MARK DeCELLESGENERALAdversity introduces a man to himself.*

Mark, hardy commuter from Longueuil came to Loyola in his freshman year from D'Arcy McGee High School. Besides being a top bridge player, Mark is renowned for his lengthy discussions with his fellow students on current political problems. He has also found time in his busy schedule to participate actively in several sports. His determination and ambition as well as his cheerfulness and warm out-going personality will be a great asset to him in his future career.

JEFFREY FORDHONOURS ENGLISH

*And by such wheeling we but thus prevaile
To make the Serpent swallow his own Tails.*

Jeff has been able to become totally involved in, without becoming fanatical about any number of projects and concepts during his four years at Loyola. His NEWS was a source of controversy, even enmity; but Jeff himself never lost a friend through it. His Drama Society had a most successful year, yet its president affected neither an ascot tie nor a nervous breakdown. Student government, publications and drama he helped to mould; they may regress or change. The impression he made on his friends is indelible.

EIGHT YEAR MAN

PAUL GAGNONGENERALQuotation is a good thing. There is a community of thought in it.*

Paul entered freshman year from College de St. Laurent and showed himself an able and earnest student at Loyola. His quiet sense of humour, bright intellect and personality have earned him a considerable number of friends. His exceptional ability to get things done has always made him a good man to know. Paul is contemplating a career in law where his clear and practical mind, and his sound judgement assure him success.

GEORGE DeBENEDETTIHONOURS ECONOMICS

Blood, sweat, and tears in the short run, and may be success in the long-run.

George is best known for handing in essays long over due. Having so much to do and so little time to do it has been a perennial problem with George. Yet he has managed to maintain a good academic standing as well as take an active part in campus life. His avid interest in student affairs is quite evident from his participation in student activities. As a result of his experiences in student government one can always find him in the midst of a discussion on such topics as whether or not the treasurer of the student government should be bonded, or who should be the comptroller of student funds. His flashing smile and confident manner have proven to be valuable assets during his years at Loyola.

KENNETH DesROCHESECONOMICSIf you think you're on the top of the world today, it is wise to remember it turns over every twenty-four hours.*

Ken is the fine example of an all round student. Coming to the College by way of Loyola High School where he developed his many athletic and administrative talents, he soon became a leading figure on campus. During the past three winters he has been a stalwart defenseman on the Varsity hockey squad. In the fall he was one of the top golfers in Ottawa St. Lawrence competition. A host of administrative positions culminated in his election to President of the I.A.C. in his Senior year. Ken plans to further his education by studying for his M.A.B. at the University of Western Ontario.

Sometimes I get overwhelmed with the enormity of what I'm not doing.

The Quarrel of the Universe let be, Omar Khayyam*

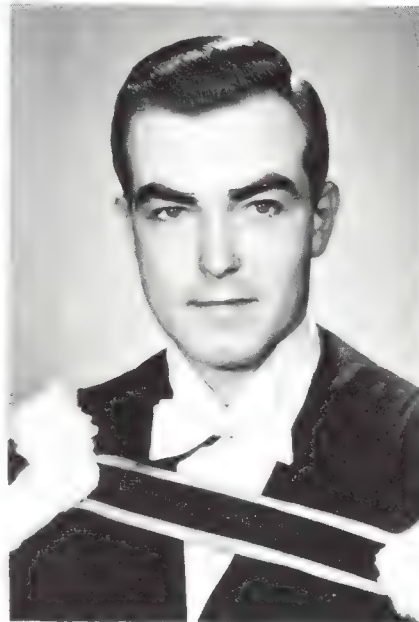

André graduated from St. Leo's Academy in 1957. During his stay at Loyola, he took a year of engineering, then he changed over to Arts. André was known particularly for his interest in and talent for languages. Besides that, he had a wide variety of interests such as photography, model-building, high-diving, and judo. His easy-going nature and his quiet appreciation of the good things in life best explain his inconspicuousness on the campus. He plans to continue his studies either in law or in languages, and we are confident that in either field he will succeed.

One may be ambitious but if he doesn't persevere he won't be successful in life.

Bill is an eight year man at Loyola. In his third year he switched from pre-med to political science. In that same year he was one of the founders of the conservative club on campus. Since then his days were filled with organization, constant planning and never-ending discussions to put the Conservative Club on a firm foundation. He seems to have made up his mind that politics is his field. He plans to study law which will help give him a good background for his future days in politics.

It is written on sheepskin — he thus goes prepared to take his first slide down the razor-blade of life.

Jack has been at Loyola for seven years missing one year, for Senior Matriculation at McGee. During this period the outstanding quality of his character has been that of acquiring many friends and of being a genuine and true friend to each and every one of them. Aiding this quality is his quick-witted sense of humour which he applies to a variety of subjects. Jack seems to be set on entering the business world but whatever he chooses he is bound to be a success, and all his friends wish him the best of luck in the future.

Banjo-picker Brian is one of those who came to Loyola and took Science, then decided that the grass was greener on the artistic side of the fence. He need never regret that decision, for his calm assurance and diligence have made him one of the College's top English students.

An athlete, administrator, journalist, and gentleman Don's list of activities speak for themselves and upon graduation he will leave behind a name synonymous with student government and athletics. But above all, his sincerity and popularity have carved out a prominent place for him in Loyola's annals.

Beware of the man of one book.

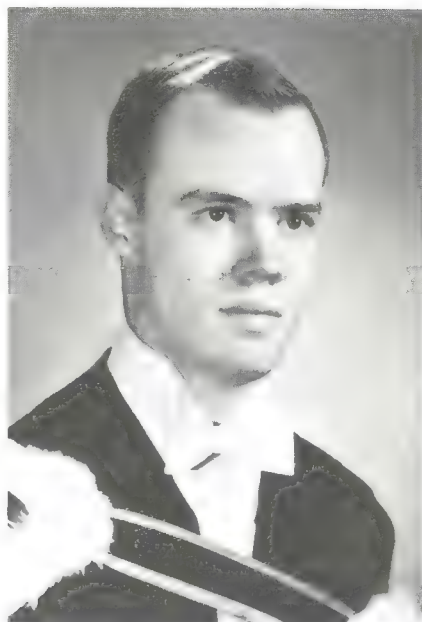

Bill came to Loyola from Catholic High equipped with an Arts and Science degree. He chose the fine field of Arts and has proved himself to be one of those rare fellows who can mix athletics, studies and social life and still remain on the Dean's good list. Being of friendly character and having firmness of purpose, we feel he is assured of success in his chosen field of teaching.

Veni... vidi... nunc vincere spero.

Ron, who is a product of Trois-Rivieres, has won the esteem of his English compatriots during his eight years at Loyola. After a glorious high school, this controversial figure was active both in intramural sports and extra-curricular activities. His spirited personality and his popularity gained him the presidency of the Arts Society in his junior year. Turning more to intellectual pursuits in his final year, he again illustrated his diversified talents. Ron's individuality and sincerity will carry him towards much success in the future.

Men who are orthodox when they are young are in danger of being middle-age all their lives.

Here is a man who has everything at Loyola. Review Editor and Varsity athlete — he wins the toughest of all student council elections by four votes and then bravely stays with the sinking ship of needed constitutional reform. But above all here is a man whose talent and personality have etched for him a permanent place in these hallowed halls.

EIGHT YEAR MAN

DAVID O'BRIENHONOURS ECONOMICS

Work as if everything depended upon you, pray as if everything depended upon God.

During his four year stay at Loyola, Dave has impressed his colleagues as a profound and critical thinker. The fact that he is a perennial academic leader of his class has never affected this Westmount lad, who is always willing to lend a helping hand to his less fortunate classmates. When his busy schedule permits it, Dave loves to participate in a college symposium where he ordinarily becomes a challenging and controversial figure. With his diversified talents and his well-rounded education, he will certainly be a credit to his college in his future endeavours.

GREGORY ONORATOHONOURS ECONOMICS

Greg hails from Preston, Ontario. After graduating from Preston High School, he enrolled in the Honours Economics course at Loyola and has been active in boarder's society for the past four years. Upon graduation he intends to further his studies at Osgoode Hall Law School in Toronto.

JOHN O'CONNORHONOURS HISTORY

If, after all, men cannot always make history have a meaning, they can always act so that their own lives have one.

— Albert Camus

By representing all those likeable traits of the Irish character and expressing them with tireless exuberance, John has easily gained the esteem of his "confreres" at Loyola. He has actively participated in various College organizations and functions with an admirable self-assurance which will no doubt persist in the legal profession, and many more cocktail parties, which he intends to undertake. Ambitious and intelligent, and with a fine sense of humor, he will most certainly be a credit to himself and to Loyola which helped produce him. We wish him well.

D'ARCY PALLETTPRE-MEDICAL

*Learning without thought is wasteful
Though without learning is perilous. — Confucius*

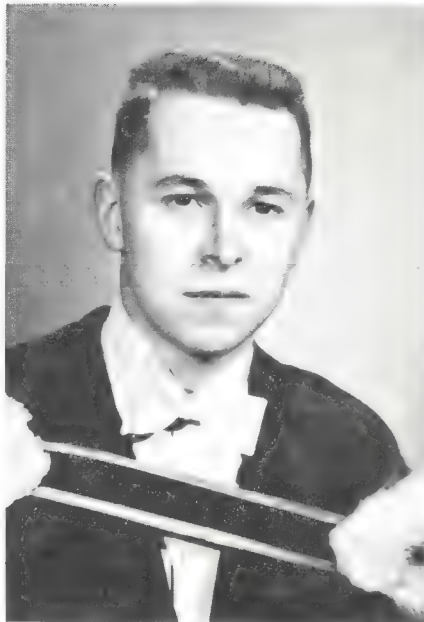

D'Arcy has realized only limited success in his endeavour to remain inconspicuous. His love of music and his ability as a guitarist were inevitable to see him in the limelight. In his pre-medical studies he has succeeded in mastering most of the sciences; however he still finds the chronological system a puzzle as is evidenced by his late arrival at classes. D'Arcy plans to continue his studies in the field of medicine and doubtless will be successful.

Quisquid agis, age prudenter respice finem.

Chuck joined us last year after six successful years in high school and college in 'Old' Quebec and immediately won the esteem of everyone in his class. Usually, a very active man in extra-curricular activities, he quieted down considerably at Loyola, probably to devote all his time to studies. Whatever field Charley chooses, we are all convinced that he will become a standout in his profession.

ROBERT POLOMENOPRE-MEDICAL

Learning is indispensable.

If at times around Loyola, school spirit might have seemed to be a bit lax, it was probably due in contrast to the high concentration of spirit centred in fellows like Bob. His duration at Loyola has been punctuated by a vitally active and unselfish interest in the people and events of this college. Compound this with academic and music ability and you have in Bob a close to ideal college graduate. The sheer momentum of his energy should carry Bob to whatever heights of achievement he will set for himself.

A Senior Matriculation graduate at Cardinal Newman, Edward entered General Arts at Loyola in Sophomore year. He has a wide variety of interests, ranging from athletics to history and philosophy. During the past few years, Edward has been occupied with a study of the Third Reich. He intends to continue studying towards a Commerce degree.

Veni, Vidi, Vici . . .

During his eight years at Loyola, Wayne has always been known for his own particular brand of dry humor. His theories on the state of Canadian affairs and the need for a distinctive Canadian Flag have enlivened many a public speaking class. In his spare time Wayne, who is a talented musician in his own right, is addicted to Dixie land and Jazz. His argumentative prowess as well as his quick-thinking ability will undoubtedly aid him in his chosen field of law.

So little done, so much to do.

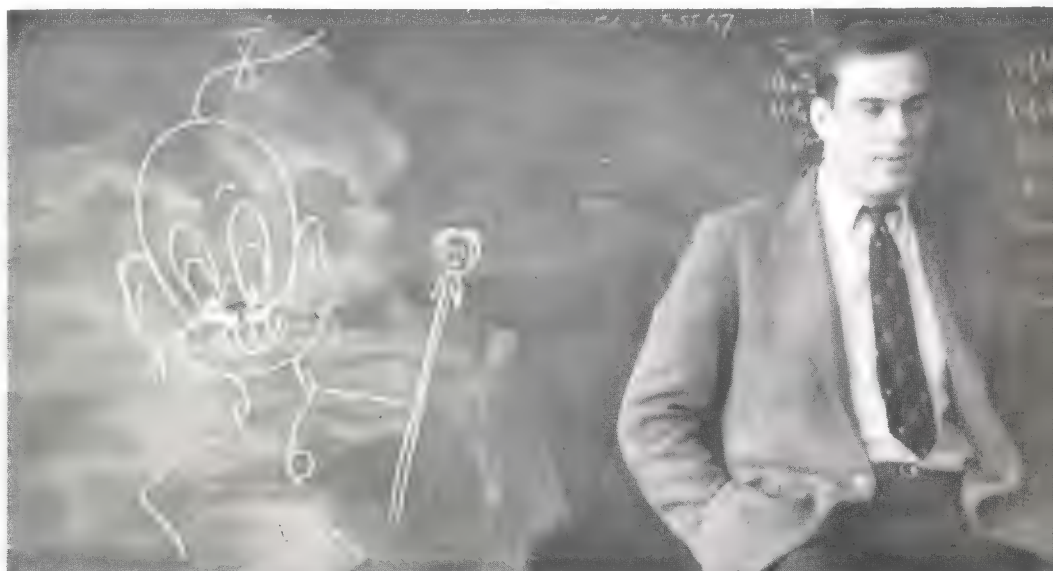

Edward, hailing from the historic city of Quebec, has captivated the understanding and interest of both students and professors alike during his eight years at Loyola. His administrative and scholastic abilities have constantly been exhibited through his active participation in both local and extra-curricular activities. His consciousness and reasoned approach to life, which has been illustrated throughout his years at Loyola, is evidence of a well-ordered man. We have enjoyed his companionship and trust that a friendship will remain and flourish in the years to come.

PAUL ROBERTGENERAL

Paul came to Loyola from Catholic High on a scholarship. He has shown a keen interest in politics, especially in the provincial field. He should be very successful in his chosen profession, Law, as he has a serious attitude towards his studies. His favourite pastimes are playing chess and attending folk music festivals. He also enjoys the odd game of bridge and possesses a keen sense of humor which makes him an amiable fellow.

Such and so various are the tastes of man.

With Mark, we have another eight year man graduating from the college and one who, over the years has maintained an ideal balance between academic pursuits and school activities. Never one to underestimate the value of hard work with the books, Mark has, at the same time, an enviable list of activities to his credit. His laconic sense of humor and easy-going manner have won for him the friendship of many of his fellow graduates. Mark plans to continue his studies in medicine, and it is felt by all those who know him, that he will bring to the medical profession the same warm personality and level-headedness that he has always shown in his years at Loyola.

And all our knowledge is, ourselves to know.

During his three years at Loyola, Simon became more anglicized than the English themselves! Even though he is one of the youngest graduates this year, his maturity and common sense are comparable to those of his fellow classmates. He has also developed a great taste for the opposite sex, which, with his golf, bridge, and his studies, occupy him most of the time. There is no doubt in our mind that he will succeed in the field of medicine, and that he will become a leading man in this realm.

ROBERT SIMS

GENERAL

*And what is madness
To those who only observe, is often wisdom
To those to whom it happens. — Fry*

Behind a mask of common sense and maturity, Bob concealed a wealth of imagination, an abundance of creative energy, and an unmistakable 'joie de vivre.' When he chose to reveal these, he produced plays like "Of Mice and Men" and two of the most memorable Carnival variety shows. When he was not occupied in this way, he won the admiration and respect of his friends through his impeccable taste and disarming sincerity.

Probably the greatest basketball talent ever to come to the college, "Vad" needs no introduction even to the least athletic of readers. Quiet and unassuming despite his talent, J.C.'s great popularity is witness to the fact that there can be no real substitute for a solid personality. Tom plans to continue in post-graduate work and we wish him the greatest success in all his future endeavours.

*A man's world is in danger of deteriorating when he thinks he has found the one best formula for doing it.
— Eugene O'Neill*

Carl is another "Town" boy who has had a successful career at Loyola. During his stay he has livened up many a dull session with his truly humorous comments on any situation. His ability for short pointed descriptions of people and things has brought laughter to many. His pet aversion seems to be the Pre-Christmas exams, which have a nasty habit of cropping up during his booming Christmas tree business. Indeed his quick analytical mind and keen business sense assure him of a very successful career in the field of medicine. His warm personality and humour will be greatly missed around Loyola.

College is but the beginning of education.

A native of Gananoque, Ontario, Joe came to Loyola via St. Lawrence U. His varied interests range from an enthusiastic sports car racer to a classical music lover and pianist. His pet peeve is the morning alarm; so much so that Joe will celebrate graduation by having his first breakfast in four years. Joe's straight forwardness and natural humor have made him one of the most popular and well-liked of the science graduates.

RENE CHARTRANDGENERAL PHYSICS

The world drives men to assume characters which are not their own.

During his years at Loyola, Rene has accomplished much, not only in his chosen field of physics and mathematics but also in securing profitable and everlasting "bonds" and experience outside of college life. His conscientious and persevering qualities have helped him maintain high scholastic standings; on the other hand his good naturedness and fine sense of humour have made him well liked by all. We feel this self-assured individual is bound to meet with continued success in whatever field he chooses.

*He who will not reason is a bigot,
He who cannot is a fool,
And he who dares not is a slave.*

This grad of McGee High has openly shown a disreverence for the saying that a scientist hides behind his test tubes. A natural leader, he has turned to an active role in campus politics and international affairs. He makes it a point to be informed about the world around him. Unafraid to make known his opinion, he becomes a lively member of any group. He has also done his best for his fellow science students through the years, culminating this year by heading the Science Students' Association.

JOHN DEVLINCHEMISTRY

There is no mystery of the physical world which does not point to a mystery beyond itself.

A graduate of St. Leo's Academy, Johnny came to us in Sophomore year via D'Arcy McGee's Senior Matriculation. This creative genius holds the formula to some of the foulest smells in the history of Loyola's Chemical Annals. Among his accomplishments we find: bongo-drum playing, paintings of monasteries, home-made wine and the sight of an engagement ring. As far as qualities go, honesty and true friendship, intelligent perseverance and the pursuit of ideals are only a few. Following graduation he plans to go on to post-graduate studies in organic chemistry, make a million dollars and eventually win the Nobel Prize!

EGBERT ARCHIBALDSCIENCE, PRE-MEDICAL

*With truth I am inspired; the good I shall persue;
And hope to end where I begun — In one with being.*

Archie, (as he is better known by his friends) will be one of the few members of this graduating class who will be long remembered by the rest of the college: First, because by sheer persistence, he brought soccer back to Loyola; Secondly, because his dynamic but quiet personality and his uncanny knack of public speaking won him not only the vice-president seat on the S.A.C., but the friendship of all.

TERRY CONWAYCHEMISTRY

The distance is nothing; it is only the first step that counts.

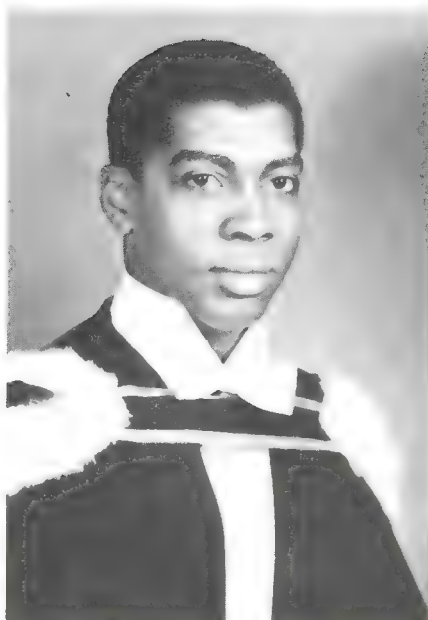

Quiet and unassuming, Terry has managed to cope with the problem of education consistently well. Although known to some of his friends as "Wee Terry" he stands high in the opinion of those whom as a lab instructor, a tutor, and a friend. His avid interest in chemistry is exemplified in his revolutionary thought, apparently impractical ideas on various and sundry experiments. Terry's ready smile and keen observations will win him many friends and assure continual success.

Where there's a will there's a way.

A summer working at Lake Louise introduced Frank to the joys of mountain climbing and since then, he has been gaining altitude; both in his studies and on the cliff faces hereabouts. A man with genuine "fellow feeling for his fellow man," Frank's warm personality and ready smile have gained him many friends during his stay at Loyola. Equipped with a true scientist's skepticism . . . ? has often quashed many an artsman's ramblings and has endeared him (?) to many a beleaguered professor. We feel certain that Frank will succeed in anything he decides to do after graduation and we wish him all the best in his post-graduate studies in chemistry.

His sudicious practicality leaves no question as to his choice of Civil Engineering as a profession. Although Luc's main concern is Engineering, he has also shown a keen interest in the Arts and Philosophy. His various other activities have centered around his desire for the outdoors. No matter which university Luc chooses to attend, he will be a definite asset to the faculty.

Error struggling on toward the living truth.

— Romain Rolland

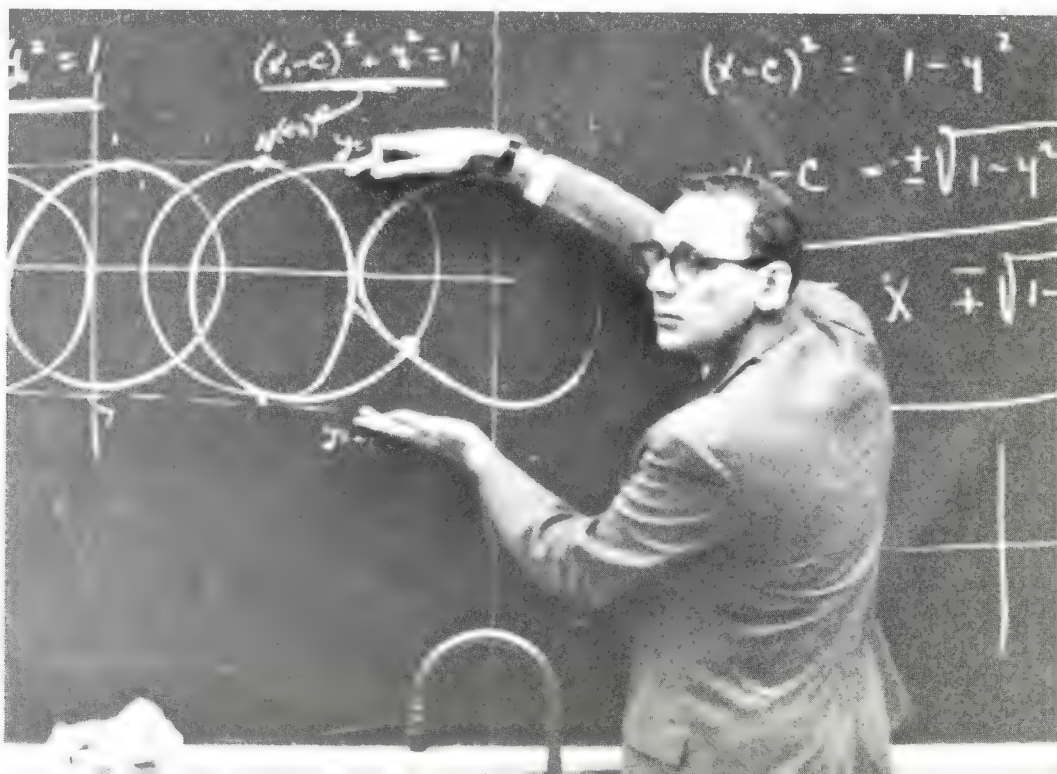

Derek was not born with a silver spoon in his mouth but rather a gold spot in his hair. This however, is not his best known attribute on campus. His academic prowess and extra-curricular achievements combined with his carefree personality have gained for him many life-long friends at Loyola. His scientific method has worked wonders in the chem lab. "If it doesn't react, talk to it." Even though this may not be the secret to success, we know that he will have continued success in his chosen field of medicine.

Madison Avenue has its "grey flannel" horde, but Loyola can lay claim to the guy in the "blue lab coat." The boy comes from Peterborough, Ontario (a province noted for its lenient liquor laws) and consequently has been here for three years. During this time the only thing that Bob has provided is that he is pretty capable of causing as good a stink as anyone else in the organic lab. Being an optimistic pessimist (whatever that is) he can usually give more reasons why not than why for. Right now Bob's future is divided between industry and teaching. Whichever field is chosen, it shouldn't suffer from his presence and talents.

RICHARD KIND SCIENCE, MECHANICAL ENGINEERING

So much is a man worth as he esteems himself.

The "versatile Uke," as George is fondly called has always given his best both on the field of sports, where he starred on the Varsity Soccer Team, and in the classroom in his chosen vocation of mechanical engineering. Success is the culmination of knowledge well attained and put to good use. And here stands the most successful of them all.

Tom came to Loyola from the Bell Telephone Company in 1958. Originally having planned a career in engineering, he soon became interested in the humanities after the best Loyola tradition and transferred to the Science Faculty, in which he could enjoy the best of both fields. Although mainly preoccupied with Science, Tom has found time for outdoor sports, particularly hunting and fishing, and has contributed greatly to the welfare of the other students through his efforts on behalf of the S.S.A. sponsored Tutoring Program. However, we think he'll best be remembered for his rather exceptional unorthodox "party" spirit.

Don't judge a man's worth by his date of birth.

Peter's graduation will bring to an end a stay at Loyola that has been marked by administrative and athletic success. His contribution in the administrative field includes a three year tenure as class president, president of the Commerce Society, as well as his infamous motion with regard to the C.O.T.C. mess. He has also distinguished himself in the athletic field as the Warrior goal-keeper for the past few years. The "old man," as he is referred to by his friends on campus, is expected to continue his studies at night while holding down a leading position in the banking world. We wish him the best of luck in both.

During his stay on campus he has helped ease the frustrating tensions of everyday college life by giving us a slight glimpse of his award-winning smile, which is always exhibited in its true splendor Monday through Friday. Probably "Chuck" will be remembered most on campus for his fine display of talents while working on the ice sculptures during the Winter Carnivals. After graduation he intends to work for a Chartered Accountants firm and study for his degree at McGill.

Despite his intellectual pursuits, Brian still found time to play Varsity football and establish himself as a bridge player of note. He intends to make his mark in the business world and his colleagues wish him all the success possible.

DAVID P. RANNIEECONOMICS

Life is not a bowl of cherries, but a bowl of raisins: raisin kids and raisin money.

Ever since he came from Loyola High, "Big Dave"—as he is called by his friends—has been known for his ever-present smile and jovialness. His interests are widely spread; from managing the Championship soccer team, playing basketball, bridge and taking long hikes on the weekends to Tetraultville, to even some studying. His cheerfulness will certainly help him in his future commercial career in Business Administration. We all wish him the best of luck.

CHRISTIAN MIODEKCOMMERCE ECONOMICS

God helps those who help themselves.

Chris is one of the best groomed members of the senior class. His preoccupation with analysing the world's political troubles has not prevented him from contributing as a valued executive of the P.C. club. A reader of books and a fan of Leslie Roberts, Chris has acquired at Loyola an intellectual curiosity which combined with his impressive manner, will no doubt ensure for him a successful future.

*All the windy ways of men
Are but dust that rises up
And is lightly laid again. —Tennyson*

Twenty-one years ago, the world and especially the Town of Mount Royal, were blessed with the birth of one "happy-go-lucky" individual. Included in his achievements, we find a keen interest for studies, intermingled with a hidden talent for art (demonstrated by the fine automobiles found in his note book). Climaxing Hugh's list of activities, we observe that he was unofficially elected vice president of his class—representing the better half of Commerce—Accounting.

FRANKLIN RAPPELLECONOMICS

Good as it is to have infallible wisdom, the next best thing is to be willing to listen to wise advice. — Sophocles

Since stepping up to college from Loyola High School, Carson has been a strong proponent of the idea that a college education should develop the whole man. Besides being a scholarship student, he has participated in most intramural sports. Seemingly quiet he often livens up the group with new ideas and clever criticisms. Carson's main activity this year, besides taking ski instructions from a close female friend, has been Treasurer of the Winter Carnival. If the past is a criterion of the future, Carson will assuredly be successful in future studies and the business world.

THOMAS SCOTTECONOMICS

More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. — Tennyson

The possessor of an enquiring intellect, a faculty with the English language and a clear insight into any situation, Tom emerges from Loyola as a well-informed young man. A serious student and a voracious reader, he is conversant on all subjects, excelling particularly when debating world politics or when defending his often emphatic personal views. As a representative of Loyola at several important student conferences, Tom acquired a degree of self assurance which, along with the experience gained from a well-rounded student life will no doubt propel him toward a successful career as a professor of Comparative Government.

JOHN ROCHEECONOMICS

*But small and trivial is the past,
It is the future which is vast.*

The name John Roche has become over the past four years synonymous with the Loyola football and hockey contingents. The unassuming and soft-spoken athlete restricted his enemies to opponents while on the gridiron or in the arena; all others were friends and admirers. A most fitting climax to John's football career at Loyola was his being chosen to captain the team in his Senior year. Very few know of his knowledge of the investment opportunities in Canada, but this, along with the aggressiveness he has displayed in athletics, will assure him of success in his chosen field.

Dr. Hayes. Chairman of the Economics Department

GERALD SIMS*ACCOUNTING

The reasonable man adapts himself to the world: the unreasonable one persists in trying to adapt the world to himself. Therefore, all progress depends on the unreasonable man.

Gerry is an eight year man at Loyola, who has distinguished himself in many fields particularly that of coming late to classes. Despite this, he has proven himself to be a good student, who has managed to keep among the top members of his class. The future will find Gerry working his C.A.

Mr. Gagnon — Executive from the Aluminium Company of Canada.

Professor A. G. Lallier, Moderator of the discussion, a SAM Member, Mr. Gagnon, R. Prevost and H. Jean.

A S. A. M. Special Event

Above: There are those who are interested and there are others.

Editor's note: You may be wondering why these particular scenes are portrayed under Special Events. This is due to some tremendous lobbying by The Science Faculty who insist that the social life is tremendous, and to about 75 Loyola students this has become a yearly 'special event.'

Below: Neville Gray, who by all intents and purposes, looks to be working hard. Is.

SPRING SURVEY SCHOOL

Above: This boy (by Loyola standards) is considered mixed-up but keen.

Right: Dick Kind. His kind will be building Quebec's future highways (ugh)

BORN YESTERDAY

Right: Jim Hynes, Bob Boucher, Carol Traynor, Tony Pearson and Rick Fleming.

Above: Carol Lynn Traynor (as Helen) discusses monkey business with Hugie Martin (as Billie Dawn).

Below: the whole cast in the process of final casting for particular parts.
